Prolyte’s William Voskuil to visit Mediatech

Posted on July 14, 2017

“What is the worst thing you did as a kid,” we asked William Voskuil, Sales Manager from Prolyte who will be in South Africa for Mediatech. Willam says this story really happened!

“When I was learning to cycle (which is very important in the Netherlands) I loved to do aerobatics with friends. My parents specifically prohibited me from doing that.

None the less, my friends and I had a great performance until I fell and broke my elbow.

Denying this was caused due to my “aerobatic” performance and trying to ignore anything serious happened, my mum winds up my sleeve finding my underarm hanging quite unnaturally. We went to the hospital where I needed to stay for three weeks with a threat in my elbow (steel pin with a wire threat that kept the bones in place when healing). This was quite okay as I had a nice dorm with other kids, but things got a bit worse when I was diagnosed with measles. I was quarantined in the hospital for the last week I was there.

I guess I don’t have to mention what I learned after this “adventure”….
