

Separate ways for Avolites and DWR

It is with sadness to announce that DWR Distribution will no longer be the Avolites distributor in Africa. Avolites was one of the very first brands offered by DWR when the company started ten years ago. As both parties have mutually decided to go their separate paths, DWR will continue to support Avolites until a new distributor has been secured.

Koy Neminathan from Avolites comments, "It has been a pleasure to work with Duncan Riley and his fantastic team over the years and it has been a mutual agreement to part. I will surely miss the entire team and the similar work ethos DWR have to Avolites. I can reassure our customers in South Africa that we will continue to support them and for any sales or training enquires they can always contact us directly until we secure a new distributor".

"I will never forget what Steve Warren did for DWR. He welcomed me to his offices when we were just starting out, and gave me the opportunity to represent Avolites in South Africa," said Duncan Riley of DWR. "The Avolites team are an amazing bunch and we will miss them, but I know that we will still be able meet up in future and have a good laugh together. I would like to thank Koy Neminathan for the journey we've travelled. We have both tried hard over the years and it is sad to say farewell."

DWR wishes to thank all clients and users for their support. There have been wonderful moments with shows, training and good times. "We would like reiterate that while DWR will no longer sell Avolites, we will continue to provide back-up and technical support until a new distributor is in place," ended Duncan Riley.