Antari now available at DWR

DWR Distribution has been appointed the Antari Fog Machine distributor in South Africa to offer the market affordable atmospheric special effects including fog and haze machines.

Established in 1984, Antari has distributors across the globe with their range of products used for live broadcasts, festivals, corporate events, theatres, concerts, clubs, theme parks and houses of worship.

"We look forward to working with DWR, a company that cares for its customers, employees and business partners," said Sophia Ao of Antari. "DWR is a professional and efficient team with the 'we can' attitude, who listen to their customers and meet their needs."

Antari products are divided into several categories including hazers, fazers, fog machines, low fog machines, jet machines and fire training fog for generators. Their passionate R&D engineers, complemented with modern production facilities, continually create new and exciting special effects with the focus on safety and energy.

"There was a gap in the market to bring in cost-effective machines by a well-known brand," said Duncan Riley of DWR. "The Antari range will be useful for schools, clubs, touring, television, theatre and the professional market. Antari has an extensive product range, so there should be something for everyone."
